Economic Problems of Ireland in Europe

The National Bureau of Economic Research, Inc. presents an abstract of the May 2001 working paper entitled "Economic Problems of Ireland in Europe," written by Martin Feldstein. This paper discusses the general relation between the European Union (EU), the European Monetary Union (EMU), and the member countries, in light of the controversy between the EU and the Irish Republic. Feldstein describes a policy of creating investment-based personal retirement accounts that would allow Ireland to share its future budget surpluses with taxpayers.

The Clinton Legacy

Inflation in Open Economies

This paper is an introductory chapter to a book that brings together 22 of my papers written between 1965 and 1981. The chapter provides a summary of each paper and a more general discussion of the role of taxation in influencing the process of capital accumulation. The four sections of the book are: (1) Household and Corporate Saving; (2) Portfolio Behavior; (3) Business Investment and (4) Tax Incidence in a Growing Economy.

Growth Oriented Adjustment Programs

This collection of essays evaluates Bill Clinton's performance as president over two terms. Concerned with the interaction between his leadership and the changing nature of the political environment, these experts offer a context for understanding Clinton's ways of governing.
