Certification of dental assistants is not a requirement in the State of Wisconsin. However, many dental assistants choose to complete the Certified Dental Assistant examination that is offered through the Dental Assistant National Board. This certification is nationally recognized, yet only required in a few states. The purpose of this study was to identify the perceived value of Certified Dental Assisting certification of dental assistants in a State where certification is not mandated. Questionnaires were sent to 502 Certified Dental Assistants in the State of Wisconsin. These individuals were asked to evaluate their value in earning certification and the maintaining it on a yearly basis. The questionnaires were sent in July of 2012 and the results of the study were utilized to make findings and recommendations regarding the certification of dental assistants in the State of Wisconsin. The results of the study determined that dental assistants in the State of Wisconsin value certification for personal gain and satisfaction, rather than for employability. Employer requirement and recognition had minimal effect on these individuals earning and maintaining their Certified Dental Assisting credential.
