HIV/AIDS and Work

It is estimated that by the end of 2003 there were just under 38 million people living with HIV/AIDS, with all but two million of these people of working age. This report, prepared by the ILO Programme on HIV/AIDS and the World of Work, sets out global estimates of the impact of HIV/AIDS on the labour force and the working age population in 50 countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean and in more developed regions. Issues discussed include: the implications for the private and public sectors, on agriculture and concerns for food insecurity and on the informal economy; on women and children; policy implications and examples of responses to the problem in a variety of workplace settings; provision of antiretroviral therapy in conjunction with HIV prevention in the workplace and the potential for

Economic Survey of Asia and the Far East

This report evaluates the IMF's economic research activities and whether they contribute successfully to the objectives of the organisation. It considers five basic issues central to the research process which relate to: organisational structure, culture, incentives and accountability, resource allocation and dissemination. The report concludes that there is room for improvement, and makes a number of recommendations which include setting priorities for research activities, and improving incentives and accountability in the research process.

Educational psychology is the scientific study of how people learn and how teachers can foster learning. An understanding of these principles and how they can be applied to classroom situations is as crucial as it ever has been for the contemporary Australian school teacher, from early childhood through to secondary school. Australian school environments and students are changing. Many issues are having an impact on the dynamics of the contemporary learning and teaching environment, such as:

- Increasing student diversity, including those with special needs
- The pervasive impact of technology
- The introduction of the Australian National Curriculum
- The public reporting of school NAPLAN results.

This text prepares pre-service teachers for their profession by encouraging reflective practice and critical thinking. It helps inform the 'practical' teaching experience and develop skills through thought-provoking questions, activities and lesson plan analysis. It is suited for educational psychology subjects taught to student teachers from all sectors - early childhood, primary, middle and secondary.
