Feminist anthropologists first reacted against the fact that the discussion of women in the anthropological literature had been restricted to the areas of marriage, kinship, and family. Feminist anthropologists believe that the failure of past researchers to treat the issues of women and gender as significant has led to a deficient understanding of the human experience (McGee and Warms 1996

Feminist legal theory - Wikipedia

All feminist activity, including feminist theory and literary criticism, has as its ultimate goal to change the world by prompting gender equality. Gender issues play a part in every aspect of human production and experience, including the production and experience of literature, whether we are consciously aware of these issues or not.

Feminist theory and various forms of feminist critique began long before the formal naming of the school of literary criticism. In so-called first-wave feminism, the "Woman's Bible," written in the late 19th century by Elizabeth Cady Stanton , is an example of a work of criticism firmly in this school, looking beyond the more obvious male

The Ruby Tear by Suzy McKee Charnas "The Ruby Tear is a fun contemporary vampire story revolving around a theatrical production entitled "The Jewel." The author, Rebecca Brand, writes smoothly and plays well with the conventions of the gothic, which isn't too surprising when one realizes that Ms. Brand is a pseudonym for Suzy McKee Charnas, who obviously enjoyed writing this book.
